A TELLING STORY

HOLY MURDERERS and a CRAZED JEW

Some 250 years ago in Russia, near the area where the first Rebbe of Chabad, Rabbi Shneur Zalman, lived, there was a crazy man.

He had been a normal, sensible religious Jew with a wife and family until one day he suddenly lost his mind and began screaming and thrashing about for no apparent reason. His family was shocked, his friends tried to help, his neighbors shook their heads in pity and the Rabbis prayed, but it didn't help. So they collected money and went for professional help. But the doctors also were at a loss and couldn't figure out what to do. They scratched their heads and shrugged their shoulders and said that perhaps it would just go away as suddenly as it came. Or perhaps they had to be patient and gradually he would improve. But the years passed and he didn't. To have him committed to an asylum was out of the question. Then someone suggested that they try the Rebbe of Chabad, Rabbi Shneur Zalman.

So they bound him, got him into a carriage, and after several hours were in the town of Liozhna entering the Rebbe's office. In the presence of the Rebbe the madman was fairly still, once in a while giving a grunt or some other non-human sound and occasionally waving his hands, but surprisingly, when the Rebbe said he wanted to tell them a story and asked them to be seated, he sat and they untied him and he remained relatively still. The Rebbe began. "It says in the Talmud that when Nebuchadnezzar conquered Israel and his troops entered the First Temple to destroy it, they noticed there was a pool of blood bubbling on the floor of the Temple courtyard. The commanding general then gathered the Kohanim and asked for an explanation. They explained that it was the blood of a little-known Jewish Prophet called Zechariah [not the famous one who lived years later in the beginning of the Second Temple.] The accepted story is that the Jews stoned him to death because he stood in the Temple courtyard and told them things they didn't want to hear--enumerating their sins and threatening them with death and exile if they didn't repent. "But, in fact, that is not what happened.. The motive in killing him was much more positive."

The Rebbe looked at the crazy man and then at his family and continued. "The fact is that only a few men stoned Zechariah and they were 'tzadikim- totally righteous Jews--perhaps the only Jews who had not sinned in those days. They stoned him in order to save everyone else. "He did not anger anyone; he didn't even speak. They were aware that the Jews weren't ready to change their ways. "So they decided that they had to make the ultimate sacrifice even if it would cost them both this world and the next! They knew that by killing him they would die as sinners ...

"You will ask why didn't the prophet Zacharia himself refuse to make his prophecy? Certainly, he had no less love for his fellow Jews than those who killed him. Why didn't he just keep quiet? "The answer is that a true prophet is nothing more than a conduit for G-d's messages and he knows that G-d is good. "But those who killed him did worry and they felt they had no choice but to make a desperate attempt to save the Jewish people from tragedy and exile. So they murdered him.

"Now, the tortured souls of those Tzadikim who 'executed' Zechariah have been in limbo for almost 2500 years; they couldn't enter heaven because of their sin of murder. And the gates of hell also would not admit them because of their pure intentions. So they have been waiting to be rectified "That is why you came to me." The Rebbe concluded. "These souls entered your father's body and made him insane in the hope that someone could find some redeeming quality in their sin and free them. And that is what I did. "When I presented a zechut (merit) on their deed, I made a 'Tikun' (rectification) on their souls and now both they and your father are released."

Suddenly the insane man closed his eyes briefly, smiled with relief and began to breathe easily. He was cured!
